

MEETING OF THE MINDS
THE INNOVATIONS WE NEED FOR MORE SUSTAINABLE CITIES

May 11, 2009

Dear John:

Please count on our on-going and aggressive support for the establishment of Public Talks.

Can we expect help from Washington DC?

President Obama is the type of leader who'll be ready to establish Public Talks -- if only because it will advance the Administration's core goals on the global stage.

It is reasonable to expect that smart political leaders in the US and abroad will strongly support Public Talks, and you've already seen some initial indications of this.

Why would they want to help? Because Public Talks will help reduce conflict while simultaneously advancing and encouraging international dialogue between and among parties in conflict.

Members of the US Congress who bring this "new idea" to the Administration's attention can expect that Public Talks has the potential to become a major success during the years ahead for this Administration.

Sincerely,

Gordon Feller
convenor-Meeting of the Minds
www.MeetingoftheMinds2009.com
chief executive-Urban Age Institute
www.urbanage.org/magazine.php